FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

King of Prussia, Pa., March 17, 2009 — This summer, Penn's School of Nursing will prepare the next generation of scientists, leaders, educators and clinicians through a four-week intensive program for rising high school juniors and seniors. The program features cutting-edge research, the latest advances in virtual learning and clinical experience in Philadelphia's top hospitals.

Working with Penn faculty and classmates from around the world, students will experience innovative classroom curriculums that cover various health care topics. Students have access to state-of-the-art classrooms, advanced simulation laboratories and intelligently designed space where they can learn.

The highlight of the program brings students to the hospitals where they will shadow clinical nurses and observe healthcare bring practiced on every floor and in every department from the Emergency Room to the NICU to the operating theater. Students will gain clinical experience in some of Philadelphia's finest hospitals, including the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania and the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

Students will live on campus at the University of Pennsylvania with residential life managed by Julian Krinsky Camps & Programs. They'll explore Penn and Philadelphia on planned site-seeing excursions while enjoy evening and weekend activities including recreational and cultural trips design to provide a truly East Coast and Ivy League experience.
