FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

King of Prussia, Pa., January 30, 2006 — Julian Krinsky has dozen of summer programs for students to choose from, but his Yesh Shabbat program is closest to his heart. Yesh Shabbat, a modern orthodox program for observant Jews, is an opportunity for Jewish teens to grow in their faith and family heritage while having the time of their lives.

“Yesh Shabbat is a comfortable environment where students can learn, worship and play with teens similar to them,” said Julian Krinsky. “It’s an opportunity for them to grow in knowledge and understanding of traditional Judaism while enjoying high-level instruction in enrichment, sports and the arts.”

Located at Cabrini College on Philadelphia’s Main Line, Yesh Shabbat is a shomer shabbat summer program with Torah learning and daily minyanim. Throughout the week, students take part in Torah discussion and seminars moderated by our rabbi, staff and guest speakers on topics of interest to the community.

Each day, students receive individual instruction from a specialized teaching staff in classes such as business, drama, SAT Prep, robotics and fashion design. Tennis, golf and basketball even conclude with a Maccabiah-style tournament.

Students also participate in projects to strengthen their connection with both the local and Israeli Jewish communities. The Chesed/Mitzvah program allows students to make a contribution through hands-on service, learning and advocacy.

Julian Krinsky offers unforgettable summer experiences for Jewish teens with unique daily programming and evening and weekend excursions to area destinations.
