King of Prussia, Pa., February 1, 2008 — For observant teens looking to experience a fast-paced summer of learning, discovering and growing; Yesh Shabbat offers a large assortment of pre-college courses complimented by Torah study, daily Tefilah, and glatt kosher food. Julian Krinsky's renowned program is a truly unique experience no other observant camp can rival.

Yesh Shabbat helps modern, sophisticated young people develop their academic talents in a comfortable environment where they can live and learn with their peers. "It's an opportunity to grow in knowledge and understanding of traditional Judaism while enjoying classes that will help prepare student for the college admissions process," said Julian Krinsky.

Yesh Shabbat offers a great selection of courses so students can concentrate on the subjects they already enjoy, try something new, or do both. Courses range from SAT Prep to community service and business to drama. Also available, Yesh Shabbat internships that let students "try on" a career so they can decide whether they want to spend their college years preparing for it. Interns may find themselves in studios, offices, museums or labs, behind the microphone or on the stage.

Located at Cabrini College on Philadelphia's Main Line, this innovative summer program offers one-, two- and three-week sessions. Students enjoy air-conditioned college dorms, private and semi-private rooms with refrigerators, access to their cell phones and meals at Kosher facilities under orthodox rabbinical supervision, courtesy of chefs from Penn Hillel.

Every Sunday students have the opportunity to visit various regional destinations and attractions such as Great Adventure, Hershey Park or New York City. Julian Krinsky's traditional observant community will provide memories that last far beyond this summer.
